What gets randomised:

This manual randomises your equipment and powers, sword, equipment upgrades, Bone Charm slots and adds “zone keys” which restrict which areas of the map you can travel to. Zone keys are the only hard blockers because Dishonored is so open in how you approach it.

Checks are given for collecting Bonecharms, Runes, Blueprints and Paintings, along with completing missions and a few other tasks.

IMPORTANT :
In order for all checks to be reachable without having to replay large chunks of the game, you need to poison the bootleg elixir still for Granny Rags, and do at least the first of the two jobs for Slackjaw during House of Pleasure. You also have to spare at least one of the Boyle sisters and do the duel with Lord Shaw during Lady Boyle’s Last Party. All other checks should be obtainable regardless of your decisions, but failing to make these choices will lock you out of checks and require replaying parts of the game.

Cheats:
It is possible to activate the developer console if you are running the PC version of the game, and I would recommend doing this to give yourself extra runes, allowing you to purchase powers as soon as you are sent the item instead of being locked to how many runes you can have obtained by that point in vanilla.

This is an excellent guide for how to enable and open the console. From there if you want to take my recommendation you can enter “giverunes 30” (or some other number) when starting a new game.
